

Short description:

mpa, the journal for applied metrology, testing procedures and automation engineering, provides the practical and theoretical knowledge necessary for engineers and designers in industry, R&D, and consultancy to cope with their tasks. The editorial scope comprises all areas of automation engineering, involving components and networks as well as even entire process control systems. The concern of R&D, manufacture, and quality control are central issues within the editorial programme, with metrology and testing as integral components of automated processes being the focus of reporting.

Through specialist essays, interviews and reports, mpa transfers directly usable, practice-oriented information.

mpa reports on product novelties, and publishes in each issue an up-to-date market survey from mpa's range of topics. Features on theoretical principles and latest research results round off the editorial picture.

mpa is an indispensable source of information for both users and suppliers of components, devices, systems, and installations used in metrology, testing and automation, as well as in electrical and power engineering.
